With Holidays
It's Meaning, Not
Date, That Counts

This may be annoying news to schoolboys who have trouble memorizing existing dates, but the fact is the adult world is thinking about shaking up some of those dates—and apparently most of the grownups like the idea.

I hasten to tell the school-boys, however, that it won't really bother them, and in all probability they will agree with adults that what is being proposed is truly a good thing. The historical dates in question won't actually be changed—but the time of celebration will be.

For years editors, including this one, have advocated the switching of mid-week holidays to the nearest Monday—increasing the usual one-day observance to the three-day span from Friday night to Tuesday morning. The idea has always appealed to those who work for a living, and now big industry management and professional folks also are coming around to it.

The December report of the Associated Industries of Arkansas, Inc., which works with the State Chamber of Commerce, tells us that:

"A majority of business firms across the nation favor changing five holidays so that all would fall on a Monday and thus provide three-day weekends for periods of observance, according to a survey conducted by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Heads of industries, businesses, banks, and other service establishments voted 8,210, to 1,356 in approval of this general idea of uniform Monday holidays.

"The holidays involved: Washington's Birthday (Feb. 22); Memorial Day (May 30); Independence Day (July 4); Veterans' Day (Nov. 11); Thanksgiving (4th Thursday in November)."

You will note the proposal falls to cover the Christmas holiday and New Year's, although the 1966 calendar forced their celebration on a Monday, giving the people a three-day observance. Presumably there was objection in some quarters due to the religious significance of Christmas—but certainly this wouldn't apply to New Year's. I would have included both. And I think this further change also awaits us in the future.

The significance of any date lies in men's realization and memory of it—not in the particular date selected for celebration. History has only a handful of truly verified dates at best. Most of them are shrouded in the uncertain chronicles of the past—and the time of their actual observance is a matter for each generation to decide for itself.

Two Judges Seek Custody of Courthouse

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The appointment of Robert O. Justice as Pulaski County Judge may just be another in a series of conflicts over the judge's seat.

Gov. Orval Faubus appointed Justice to the position and he was sworn in a few minutes after midnight Saturday by Little Rock Municipal Judge John L. Sullivan in the governor's office.

The vacancy occurred when judge-elect Tom Gulley drowned in the White River after his car plunged off a ferry.

The present judge, Arch Campbell, did not seek re-election but contends he should remain in office. After learning of Faubus' intention to appoint Justice, Campbell said he would contest such an appointment. He says that no "vacancy" exists.

After Faubus signed the papers he handed them to Justice and said, "Here's your commission — if you can hold it now."

Campbell was asked if it was true that he had changed all the locks on his office doors. Campbell said, "That's a personal matter."

Campbell said he would open the courthouse at 10:30 Monday morning.

Says War to Have Impact Politically

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Republican senators who support President Johnson's objectives in Vietnam forecast today the war will run into 1968 with a telling political impact.

Sen. Jack R. Miller, R-Iowa, said he thinks that unless the end of the war is in sight by mid-1968 "President Johnson will neither be the Democratic nominee nor the next president."

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a separate interview that what he called a "contradictory and confusing conflict" now seems likely to enhance GOP chances of capturing the presidency.

Miller, who won a new six-year term in November, suggested that perhaps Johnson might decide to retire. He said that if the President doesn't "I'd expect Bobby Kennedy to be dragged, kicking and screaming, into the nomination in the cause of saving the Democratic party."

Reminded that it was difficult to defeat a president seeking renomination and that Johnson's record was not one of quitting under fire, Miller replied, "But he's never been under the kind of fire he's under now."

Mundt said the war in Vietnam has so many contradictions about it that the voters are in a quandary. He said U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union had been answered with the Soviet supply of additional MIG fighters to North Vietnam.

He asked, "Did you ever see a war in which we forced an election to choose a government to supercede one with which we had been cooperating with in the fighting?"

"Did you ever see a war in which we ploughed ahead during the fighting with an aid program, digging ditches on one side of the road and blowing up everything on the other side?"

Mundt said another contradiction permits the North Vietnamese supply port of Haiphong to go un bombed while air strikes are carried out on highway and rail supply lines.

Miller said U.S. bombing attacks should be intensified on military targets despite the uproar over civilian casualties.

"We ought to tell the North Vietnamese we are going to strike all the military targets, including their antiaircraft emplacements, and warn them to move their civilians away from such areas," he said.

In a television interview Sunday, Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Washington would welcome assurances that a cessation of U.S. bombing attacks would not result in a flow of military strength from North Vietnam to South Vietnam.

He suggested that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant try to learn what concessions North Vietnam would be willing to make in return for a halt of the American aerial attacks.

Asked on the CBS television-radio program "Face the Nation" about Thant's request that the United States stop bombing North Vietnam, Rusk said, he has in his briefcase "a commitment by us that we are prepared to stop the bombing as a step toward peace."

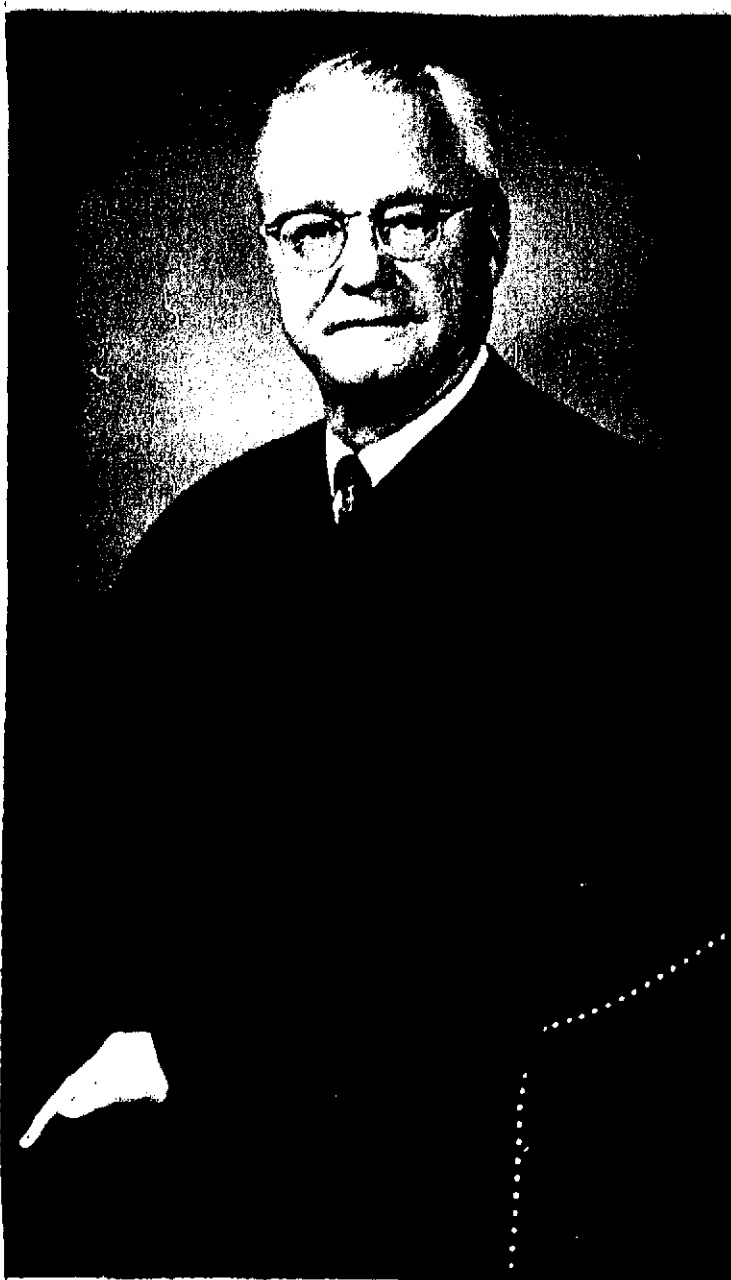

"His second point was a mutual de-escalation of violence by both sides. So far as we know, he has nothing in his briefcase on that subject from the other side."

"We hope the secretary-general, with a very wide authority as far as we're concerned, will be able to probe the other side to find out what the effect would be if we were to stop the bombing."

Mineral Worth $186 Million
BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — The Bartlesville office of the Bureau of Mines of the Interior Department says that the value of mineral output in Arkansas in 1966 was $186 million.

It was almost $7 million more than the output value in 1965. The bureau, in its year-end bulletin, said most of the increase came in cement, natural gas, sand and gravel, clay, stone and bromine production.

Justice Is Installed

JUSTICE LYLE BROWN

Judge Lyle Brown of Hope was installed Tuesday, January 2, as Associate Justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court. He succeeds Justice Ed F. McFaddin, who is retiring after twenty-four years on the court. Judge Brown is believed to be the first man to be elected statewide to a full term without opposition. Justices are elected for eight years. Judge and Mrs. Brown will presently retain their home in Hope.

1966 Best Year in Hempstead and New Year May Be Better

The year 1966 has seen tremendous growth in Hope and Hempstead County in every phase. Employment rise in the County is nine per cent and the County ranks 30th in Arkansas in total employment.

Proof of growth is represented in building permits issued. There were 103 as compared to 69 a year ago. These permits represent investments of $3,087,625 as compared to $1,215,350 a year ago. New homes built during the year numbered 52 and this does not include a $1.2 million federal housing project which will build 140 units. The average value of homes building in 1966 is $15,350. There are 4,459 electric meters as compared to 4,245 a year ago; water meters numbered 3,421 this year an increase of 103 and bank assets totaled $28,089,917 an increase of $3 million over last year.

This year marked completion and dedication of the Red River Vocational Technical school which is now in operation with 125 students. Already there is a demand for additional courses which means expansion of the school.

The new Beryl Henry grade school is about complete and the Hope Village shopping center gradually filling up. The new Federal Post Office although completed last year was dedicated this year. Standard Generator moved into its new building on the Hempstead Industrial Site and increased employment by 25 per cent. Southern Grain and Elevator Co. invested $75,000 in a storage and drying plant; G & S Manufacturing Co. added to its pulpwood loader operation, establishing 10 new jobs; Meyers Bakery expanded its Brown's serve plant creating 50 new jobs; Hope Star changed from hot metal to offset printing, representing a large expenditure; Herndon Funeral Home is now in its new building and this represents $100,000 plus expenditure; two new doctors' clinics are under construction; the farm labor station near Hope expanded facilities as did Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. which added direct dialing equipment. Hempstead County Library built a new addition; Butane Gas Company moved into its new building; Stephens Grocery Co. and Citizens National Bank have started new additions and Oakcrest Funeral Home plan new building. This and many more improvements were made during 1966.

The entire area has high hopes for the future.

Air Condition Unit Given to Foundation

W. R. Stephens, president of the Arkansas Louisiana Gas Company, has donated a Servel Air conditioning and heating unit to the Pioneer Washington Restoration Foundation for use in the recently restored Garland House at Washington, Arkansas.

The Garland House, the most recent of several antebellum homes restored by the foundation, was the house in which Augustus H. Garland, a member of President Cleveland's cabinet, married. It was the scene of many important events connected with Arkansas history both before and after the civil war.

James H. Pilkinton of Hope, president of the foundation, said that the Board of Directors passed a resolution at its meeting on December 30th thanking Mr. Stephens, and all other persons, who have donated time and money to the restoration of the Garland house.

This home and the other attractions at Washington, are open to the public, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily, with special tours during the summer and at other seasons by appointment.

DeGaulle Again Blames War on U.S.

By RODNEY ANGOVE
PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle began the new year this weekend with two stinging attacks on American intervention in Vietnam, which he says has brought on an unjust and detestable war that is spoiling the world's chances for peace.

De Gaulle told diplomats at a New Year's reception Sunday night there were signs after the two world wars of a period of peace and international cooperation "if this victory of wisdom had not been, alas, prevented by the conflict that one (nation) has unleashed and that one is cruelly prolonging on Vietnamese territory."

De Gaulle did not mention the United States by name. But in his annual New Year's Eve television address he put all the blame for the war on the United States.

"It is an unjust war because it results in fact from the armed intervention of the United States on the territory of Vietnam. It is a detestable war because it is leading a large nation to ravage a small one," De Gaulle said.

As the American and Communist Chinese diplomatic representatives listened a few feet from each other at the reception, De Gaulle said France would contribute to a settlement of the war "as soon as the well known conditions that would make this settlement possible are fulfilled."

The president said in his television address, his toughest statement on Vietnam so far, the United States should end the war by removing its troops. When that happens, he said, France will "work to swing open wide the doors for world peace to pass through."

North Vietnam's Vietnam News Agency reported De Gaulle's television statement today without comment.

In London, the British government said Sunday night it had as yet received no official Communist response to Foreign Secretary George Brown's proposal Friday for immediate peace talks by the United States and North and South Vietnam.

President Johnson said at his news conference Saturday the United States would attend such talks if North Vietnam was willing.

Brown on television denied a charge from Moscow that his proposal was intended to gain political advantage in Britain.

"I share other people's feelings and horrors at the idea of war going on," he said. "I deplore loss of life and casualties, whether caused by bombing in North Vietnam or caused by atrocities in South Vietnam."

He said he believed "President Johnson and the Americans are due a good deal of praise for wanting to get the war stopped."

2 Prisoners With Hostage Back in Jail

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Two of three North Carolina prison escapees who held a hostage for 400 miles and 30 hours last week were in a Columbus jail today.

Four days and five nights of freedom ended Sunday for Clifford Harden, 37, and Howard D. Byrd, 21, when they were arrested at the Columbus home of Harden's wife.

Still sought is Allan J. Berube, 29, who is charged with the $25,000 robbery of the First National Bank of Shelby Nov. 26. Berube, of Fall River, Mass., split with Harden and Byrd in Washington, D.C., Wednesday, leaving them with the last of four hostages taken by the trio last Tuesday night.

The hostage, Charles C. Steen, 34, of Hendersonville, N.C., escaped from Harden and Byrd Thursday. They had left him bound to a bed in a hotel at Baltimore, Md.

The three earlier hostages, a jailer and Mrs. and Mrs. Jennings Rogers of Candler, N.C., were left by the escapees near Hendersonville Tuesday night, locked in the trunk of a stolen car. They were unharmed.

Negro Woman Is Shot to Death Here

J. W. Armstrong, 20-year-old Negro, is being held here in connection with the fatal shooting about 2:15 p.m. Sunday of Gladys Fisher, 23, City Police said today.

The incident occurred at 507 North Laurel Street where they lived.

Officers said the woman was shot during an argument. She was taken to a Little Rock hospital by an Oakcrest ambulance where she died of a gunshot wound to the head from a .22 caliber pistol.

Charges probably will be fired sometime today said investigating Officers Charles Abbott and Carl Ward.

One Holiday Fatality in Arkansas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Only one New Year's holiday weekend traffic fatality had been recorded in Arkansas as the final day of the 78-hour period began.

The only victim, according to an Associated Press count, was Duell Morrison, 47, of near Batesville. Morrison died Friday night when his car plunged into the White River at the landing for the Sylamore Ferry in Izard County. Police said the ferry was on the other side of the river at the time.

State Police urged motorists to use extreme care on highways today as the final rush of homeward bound traffic moved onto the highways.

Last year Arkansas had nine traffic fatalities during the New Year's period.

F. F. Hutson Home Burns

The home of F. F. Hutson, Blevins Rt. 1, was completely destroyed by fire Friday night, Dec. 30 at about 11:30 p.m.

Origin of the fire is unknown but is believed to have been caused by a short circuit in electrical wiring. The home was only partially insured.

The Rev. Randolph Painter, minister of the Presbyterian church which Smith and Warner attended, departed from the normal service to tell his congregation of the fatal accident.

The crash occurred as the boys were on their way to Echo Valley for tobogganing at the ski resort.

One boy, David Hanchon, lived long enough to tell how it happened.

He said the boys saw an east-bound train, but started to cross the tracks in plenty of time before the train got to the crossing.

The boys failed to see an 80 m.p.h. westbound train. Witnesses said the second train hit with such force the car was fused to the front of the engine. Authorities believe both trains may have hit the car.

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — U.S. Air Force jets shot down seven Communist MIGs over North Vietnam today in the largest air battle of the war, U.S. spokesmen reported.

The U.S. jets downed the MIGs while making fighter sweeps throughout the Red River Valley near Hanoi and Haiphong, the spokesman said. They reported no American planes lost in the encounters.

All seven of the MIGs were shot down by Air Force F4C Phantom jets.

The kills raised to 34 the number of MIGs credited to American pilots over the Communist North.

At the time the MIG's were downed, F105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers were attacking Communist surface to air missile sites.

Five Youths Killed in Michigan Town

THREE RIVERS, Mich. (AP) — The bells of the new year tolled mournfully as tragedy hit this small southwest Michigan town.

Five of the town's teenagers were killed in a train-car crash five miles east of Kalamazoo New Year's Eve. Dead are David Hanchon, David Hagerman, Dennis Lockwood and his cousin, Gary Warner, all 16, and Teryl Smith, 17.

"They were all fine boys," said Leslie Christopherson, a gasoline station owner, in this town of 7,000.

The five were Boy Scouts. They were active in church work. They had jobs after classes at Three Rivers High School where all were juniors.

Dennis Lockwood was a school hall monitor. David Hanchon was a junior assistant scoutmaster of Troop 113 at Immaculate Conception church. He was also a member of the Catholic Youth Organization and the National Honor Society.

The five were average or better students, said the high school principal, Edmund Blank. "This is going to be a great loss to the junior class."

Some Three Rivers residents learned of the tragedy in church Sunday.

The Rev. Randolph Painter, minister of the Presbyterian church which Smith and Warner attended, departed from the normal service to tell his congregation of the fatal accident.

Holiday Death Toll A Building Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic deaths built up slowly this New Year's weekend, and safety experts were hopeful the final toll would be little more than that of a normal three-day weekend.

The 1967 total stood at 346. The volume of deaths was running well behind last year's record pace which resulted in 564 traffic fatalities.

On a normal three-day weekend, Dec. 9-12, The Associated Press counted 391 deaths.

A spokesman for the National Safety Council said the traffic pace could be expected to quicken late today. But he said it would not compare with other holiday periods in which more long distance driving is done.

In one of the worst accidents of the weekend, five Boy Scouts were killed in a train-car crash just east of Kalamazoo, Mich.

In Illinois a young couple and a teen-ager boy were killed New Year's Eve when a car skidded on an icy highway and collided with another. The accident occurred just east of Harrisburg.

Driving conditions were average for a winter weekend. Snow mixed rain iced roads in Connecticut and Pennsylvania. Snow fell over much of the Northeast and throughout the northern Rockies and the Dakotas. Heavy fog hung over highways along the coast of central California and rain moved through the South.

Bad weather was given much of the credit for holding down the death rate during the three-day Christmas weekend when 584 persons were killed. It was the first holiday in the last 10 in which a death record was not set.

The all-time record for a long holiday weekend was set Thanksgiving when 748 persons were killed over the four-day observance.

Last year 564 persons were killed during the three-day New Year's weekend, the largest toll for any year-end holiday.

The lowest New Year's traffic toll since World War II was 269 in 1949.

Negro Town to Drop Color Bar

MITCHELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Mitchellville, one of four all-Negro incorporated towns in Arkansas, will drop its color restrictions and allow whites to move in, says Mayor Charles Kelly.

"Things have changed," Kelly says. "And since things have changed we've changed too. We expect to be ruled by the government decision against segregation."

The town located on U.S. 65 two miles northwest of Dumas began 22 years ago, formed with the intention of being an all-Negro community by allowing no white person to lease or purchase land within the corporate limits.

Mitchellville was named after the Rev. John Mitchell, a 76-year-old Baptist preacher who led a move to sell lots from a 37-acre tract to Negro families.

The town, with a current population of 550, was incorporated in 1953.

HOWER HONORS VIRGINIA EDWARDS

On Wednesday evening, December 28 from 7 until 9 o'clock Miss Betty Ruth Schenck and Miss Mary Ann Bader entertained at the Bader home on North Hervey with a miscellaneous show in honor of Miss Virginia Edwards, bride-elect of Morton Wheatley.
Miss Edwards chose for the occasion a dress of yellow wool and pinned to her shoulder a corsage of white carnations sprayed with gold. The home was decorated in the Christmas colors of red and green, and the honoree received many lovely and useful gifts which were opened and displayed.

The serving table was covered with a cloth of Christmas green and centered with an arrangement of flocked fir and red carnations in a milk glass tureen, flanked by red tapers in milk glass holders. Hot spiced lunch, cakes and nuts were served to 12 guests, including Mrs. B. W. Edwards, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. J. C. Wheatley of Malvern, mother of the prospective groom.

SHE BURIES THE HATCHET—IN HIM

Dear Helen: I made a mistake of admitting it to my wife. At a three-weeks training conference my company put on in another city I met this woman. Well, my wife dug it out of me, because my conscience was in bad shape. I have never been untrue to her before and, believe me, I won't be again.

After a big scene, she said she'd bury the hatchet. But she's been burying it in me ever since. She uses my "infidelity" to get whatever she wants. Frankly, I'm tired of being made to feel guilty for what I did just once, and many businessmen do all the time.

I suspect my wife might even envy my boss's wife, who gets a new mink or something every time he gets a new girlfriend. Nobody hated himself more than I did, Helen, but now I'm beginning to wonder.

Should I be punished all my life for one mistake? She said she'd forgive and forget, but I'm the—UNFORGIVEN

Dear Un: You've done your penance. Now it's your wife's turn to be told. To wit:

Women who can't forget one mistake don't deserve husbands who will never make another one. When they "bury the hatchet and erect a monument to it" they're saying, "I don't want to trust you any more." . . . And a man often does what is expected of him.—H.

Dear Helen: A neighbor boy was in our yard without permission. When he saw our German Shepherd he screamed, scared the dog, so the dog bit him. We are covered by a homeowner's insurance policy which will pay the bill—the boy's parents are going to sue because they say the dog is vicious. Yet a week before the mother and son were feeding and petting our dog.

Our insurance company said that unless we get rid of the dog they will cancel our policy. They told us that even if a burglar was entering our home, and the dog bit him, the burglar could sue for damages.

Why do insurance companies say they protect you and take your payments but then, when something happens, they cancel your policy? Incidentally, I have a five-month-old baby and we can trust our dog with him. He even likes our cat.

Isn't there something we can do to keep our shepherd and still have insurance?—DOG OWNER

Dear Owner: You can't force an insurance company to change its rules, but you can try other agencies. Perhaps one will take a chance on you, though I can't offer much hope.—H.

Dear Helen: Writing to columnists is generally not my game, but I feel I can add a useful comment to the letter from "A JANE." She complained of the men who "give her the rush" for a couple of weeks, then disappear. At the same time she noted she is "not especially interested in getting married."

Assuming she has been truthful in her remark about marriage, I would suggest this attitude may be at least part of the reason men's interest dies quickly. Not that men are universally anxious for marriage, but I think most are interested in finding some kind of sincere relationship which might eventually lead to marriage. When a man finds that a woman is only interested in being dated and spending his money, with no attachments, he hits the road. I'm a man—I know!

By the same token, though, the woman who has marriage on her mind from the first meeting is equally undesirable. She scares men away by making marriage her primary interest and relegating love to a secondary position. Same applies to the man who is overanxious about marriage.

The solution must be for both sexes to maintain an open mind about romantic entanglements. Too many men and women make up their minds that they are going to get married for "X" number of years, or they "won't get involved." Then they meet someone who interests them and their preconceived attitude about love destroys any relationship before it can begin.—PSYCHOLOGY STUDENT

After a 50-year rest, stained glass is back in style. The lovely old lampshades that hung over round dining tables of golden oak are just as effective over Danish teak and the filtered, multicolored radiance is as flattering today as it was then.

So important is the return to stained glass that trend-minded fabric firms are turning out stained-glass prints, authentically colored and patterned to resemble the finest of the old-time designs. Creative homemakers have discovered that these luminous prints are wonderfully effective in modern rooms and are putting the new printed fabrics to all sorts of imaginative uses.

Here, for instance, a sawed-off umbrella is covered with a stained-glass print to create the effect of a Tiffany shade, complete with fringed edge and matching round cloth. This is a gay and inexpensive way to brighten up a tea-for-two corner and could be used in the family room, living room, dining room or even a

To make your own Tiffany corner, here are directions from Conso products, makers of the fringe which is indispensable to the job:

Using a pagoda-shaped umbrella, saw off the shaft four inches below spokes. Remove spoke caps and fabric cover. Note where fabric was secured to ribs.

Use one section of fabric as pattern. Place pattern on straight of goods and cut required sections, adding 1/4-inch seams to old stitching line. Stitch together with French seams so no raw edge shows. Then stitch 1/2-inch double hem around outer edge. Fringe may be added by machine now or by hand later.

Pull new cover down over umbrella frame. Turn in 1/4-inch at top and gather to fit tightly. Whip spoke caps in place at ends of cover seams and insert ends of spokes into caps. Align seams and ribs and handstitch together at original locations.

Attach a light socket to the shaft with loop of wire and tape the electrical cord to the shaft. Thread cord through top and weave up through chain. The chain may be attached to the ceiling, and the cord run down to an electrical outlet if you are placing the lamp in a room without a ceiling fixture. Fit socket with reflector-type bulb.

Add a circle of fringe at top to hide gathering stitches, and add deep fringe to edge of shade if you did not do this earlier.

There are many ways to make a round tablecloth, but the easiest way is to make a square one first and then trim it to the correct shape. Measure from the floor up across the center of the table and down the other side. This will be the measurement for your square fabric. For a small table, such as this one, approximately 30 inches across and 26 inches high, your measurement will come to 82 inches or about seven feet of goods. By using a complete width for a center strip and splitting a second length, sew a seven-foot square of fabric by joining the three lengths.

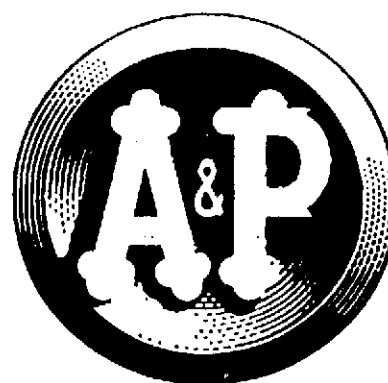

Now find the center of your square. Thumbtack a string to the center and tie chalk at the end of the string. Make a circular sweep of the square. Cut out the circle you have drawn. Press seams, add fringe, and you have a perfect circular cloth. There's no need to hem the cloth, because a hem is likely to pucker. A fringed trim is easier and prettier.

Prints such as this one are adding a whole exciting new dimension to home decorating.

Today Marks the End of College Bowls

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A year ago the nation's top six college football teams went a-bowling and when the carnage was over the first three, all unbeaten in the regular season, wondered what had hit them.

Michigan State, Arkansas and Nebraska, with shiny unbeaten staters and one-two-three in that order, were upended in the big bowl games.

Alabama, fourth-ranked with an 8-1-1 record, crushed Nebraska 39-28 in the Orange Bowl and wound up as the No. 1 team in the nation after The Associated Press' special poll to determine the college champion team.

There won't be any special poll when the bowl cannonading dies down this time because Notre Dame and Michigan State, the one-two teams for 1966, are not playing in bowl classics.

But there will be plenty of comparisons made after today's three bowl games which involve five of the Top Ten teams, topped by the return meeting of Alabama and Nebraska in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans.

Alabama, 10-0-0, the only major unbeaten-untied team, is ranked third, Nebraska, 9-1-0, is ranked fourth, in a reversal of their pre-bowl positions of a year ago.

Alabama was favored by a full touchdown because of a rock-ribbed defense and an offense triggered by quarterback Ken Stabler.

The Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., matched Purdue, 8-2-0, ranked seventh and Southern California, 7-3-0, ranked 10th. Purdue, with passing ace Bob Griese in the quarterback post, was rated a 13-point choice.

Georgia Tech, 9-1-0, ranked eighth, faced unranked Florida, 8-2-0, in the Orange Bowl night clash. Florida has quarterback Steve Spurrier, the Heisman Trophy winner at the throttle, and was rated the underdog by only the thin margin of 1½ points.

The three games were scheduled for NBC network television. The Sugar Bowl started the television marathon at 2 p.m., EST, followed by the Rose Bowl at 5 p.m., EST, and the Orange at 8 p.m., EST.

The big football weekend had been kicked off Saturday by a television tripleheader covering the Gator Bowl, Cotton Bowl, and the East-West Shrine game.

Then the pros took over Sunday with the American Football League and National Football League championships.

Still ahead were the following:

Hula Bowl at Honolulu, Jan. 6; the Senior Bowl at Mobile, Ala., Jan. 7; the NFL's Playoff Bowl between Baltimore and Philadelphia at Miami Jan. 8; the Super Bowl, matching the AFL and NFL champions at Los Angeles, Jan. 15; the AFL All-Star game at Oakland, Calif., Jan. 21, and the Pro Bowl matching NFL All-Stars at Los Angeles, Jan. 22.

At Jacksonville, Fla., Dewey Warren passed for two Tennessee touchdowns as the Vols struck for an 18-0 lead and then held off Syracuse 18-12 in the Gator Bowl Saturday despite a record-breaking performance by Orange halfback Floyd Little.

Little carried the ball 29 times for 216 yards, smashing the Gator Bowl rushing mark by 41 yards.

In the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Kent Lawrence's 74-yard touchdown jaunt on the second play from scrimmage triggered Georgia to a 24-9 victory over Southern Methodist.

Lawrence also set up a field goal with a 35-yard punt run-back and Kirby Moore fired a 20-yard pass to Billy Payne for the touchdown that broke open the game.

The East, ignited by Danny Talbot's precision passing and bolstered by half a dozen stars from Notre Dame and Michigan State, trampled the West 45-22 in the 42nd Shrine classic at San Francisco.

North Carolina's Talbot completed his first 11 passes and fired three TD strikes. Notre Dame's Nick Eddy raced 49 yards for one touchdown and Michigan State's Clint Jones hauled two yards for another.

Bart Starr Is the Star of Game

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — It was about a month ago that Jack Christiansen, the San Francisco 49ers coach, said of Bart Starr: "If Green Bay goes on and wins the championship, they ought to give Bart Starr about 10 shares."

If the Packers had another vote today they might very well cut in their quarterback for an extra piece of that big money ahead in the Jan. 15 Super Bowl with the Kansas City Chiefs.

Starr set a personal high Sunday with four touchdown passes for the Packers in their 34-27 victory over Dallas in the National Football League title game.

Starr, a veteran of 11 seasons of pro ball, joins Sid Luckman as the only quarterback to have led their teams to four NFL championships. Luckman did it with the Chicago Bears in 1940-41-43-46. Starr's titles came in 1961-62-65-68. His only defeat was in 1960 when the Packers lost to Philadelphia.

"I don't give any thought to individual performances at all," said the modest Alabama grad. "This is a game for 40 men. When you win it's great for all 40."

Although Starr led the NFL's passers, completed 62.2 percent of his passes and averaged 8.99 yards per throw, it has been popular to low rate him as reluctant to go to the long ball.

Starr showed he could throw the long one Sunday when he hit with 19 of 28 for 304 yards, including TD pitches of 17 to Elijah Pitts, 51 to Carroll Dale, 16 to Boyd Dowler and 23 to Max McGee.

He threw on second down and seven yards to go for the score to Pitts, first and ten to Dale, second and nine to Dowler and third and 19 to McGee.

In the Packers' drive for the score that proved to be the winner, Starr came up with vital first downs when the Packers were on third down with the yardages of 19, 12 and 19.

"We didn't go into the game with any plan to throw long," he said. "We thought we would try if the circumstances dictated it, just as we had done all season. It wasn't unusual that I threw touchdowns to four different receivers. That's basic in our pass offense, to use a lot of receivers."

In five championship games Starr has completed 69 of 118 passes for 56.7 percentage, 878 yards and nine TDs. He has been intercepted only once.

Green Bay Holds Off Cowboys

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Vince Lombardi, coach of Green Bay's mighty Packers, said the National Football League championship would be won by Green Bay if quarterback Bart Starr was hot and by Dallas if quarterback Don Meredith was hot.

Coach Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys said you couldn't make mistakes against Green Bay and hope to win.

Both coaches were right Sunday as Green Bay won its fourth NFL title in six years by beating Dallas 34-27.

The Packers now meet Kansas City, the American Football League champion, in the Super Bowl at Los Angeles Jan. 15.

Bart Starr certainly was hot as he passed for four touchdowns. Meredith was only lukewarm. He passed for only one.

And Dallas made two errors that lost it the ball game—or at least a sudden death chance at it.

Mel Renfro fumbled a kickoff that handed Green Bay a touchdown. The other Dallas error came when a motion penalty set the Cowboys back to the Green Bay six with a minute and a half to go and the Cowboys on the Packer one-yard line.

Green Bay made some mistakes, too, but Landry had said nothing about that since the Packers are known as a team that usually covers up its mistakes with some good plays later.

An instance of this came when Packer defensive back Tom Brown committed pass interference to give Dallas the ball on the Green Bay two. It was this same Brown, who intercepted Meredith's pass in the end zone to end Dallas' last hope with only 28 seconds left on the clock.

Had Dallas scored and kicked the extra point, the game would have gone into a sudden death playoff.

Landry said he thought Dallas would have won the game in that event "since it had momentum riding with it."

But the observation about errors would still stand — Dallas probably wouldn't have won the playoff had it made a mistake.

It was a great football game and it kept a packed Cotton Bowl (with 75,504 fans) still packed at the finish while the nation outside of Dallas enjoyed it on television (CBS).

Dallas actually lost it in the first four minutes when Green Bay took the opening kickoff back 76 yards in eight plays for a touchdown on Starr's 17-yard toss to Pitts, and when, on the ensuing kickoff Mel Renfro, hit hard by Brown, fumbled and Jim Grabowski, rookie back, back, picked it up and scattered 18 yards to a score.

Dallas managed to tie it at 14-14 in the first period but never did take the lead. Green Bay added another touchdown in the second quarter on a 51-yard bomb from Starr to Carroll Dale. Dallas could get only Danny Villanueva's 11-yard field goal, and the Packers led 21-17 at the half.

Dallas pulled within a point on Villanueva's 32-yard field goal but Green Bay led 28-20 going into the fourth period.

It seemed wrapped up for the steady Packers when Max McGee took a 28-yard shot from Starr for another touchdown. Bob Lilly blocked Don Chandler's try for point but it didn't seem important with Green Bay holding a 34-20 lead.

However, the Cowboys gathered themselves for a feverish finish. Renfro returned the kickoff 26 yards to the Dallas 29. Meredith finally loosed a bomb to Frank Clarke that gained 68 yards and a touchdown and suddenly Dallas was back in the game.

Another mistake by Green Bay—a puny 16-yard punt by Chandler—set Dallas up on the Green Bay 47 and the Cowboys were ready to ride. They did—right down to the Green Bay one-yard line.

Then came the penalty that set the Cowboys back so that a four-yard pass to Pettis Norman still left two yards to go. Brown made his interception, and time ran out for Dallas in its first great bid for a championship in seven years of trying.

A personal foul penalty set up Dallas' first touchdown from the Green Bay three, with Danny Reeves scoring it. The second Cowboy score came on a 59-yard drive in which Don Perkins got the last 23 yards. Perkins was the leading ground-gainer of the day with 108 yards on 17 runs—an average of 6.3.

Buckpasser Does It the Hard Way

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Buckpasser obviously is a horse whose main aim is to get the job done, even if he does it the hard way.

The newly-turned four-year-old, whose next appearance at Santa Anita will be in the $50,000-added San Fernando Stakes Jan. 14, proved this again in his California debut Saturday in the Malibu Stakes.

He won, as the favorite and the famous should, but only by ¾ of a length after scaring his supporters silly.

"He never does anything easily," said the trainer, Eddie Naylor. "He just doesn't win in a big way."

But win Buckpasser did as he captured his 13th straight of the year, 13 of 14 for 1966 and boosted his lifetime earnings to $1,237,174—the richest three-year-old in the history of racing.

For the record, Drin was second, trailed by Kings Favor and six other challengers.

The main target for Buckpasser from the stable of Ogden Phipps is the $100,000-added Charles H. Strub Stakes Jan. 28.

Only UCLA, Louisville Unbeaten

Princeton won't be able to provide a first-hand appraisal of the top-ranked UCLA basketball team this season, but the Tigers should be able to offer a good comparison of teams No. 2 and 3.

The Tigers will be in that position after they meet third-ranked North Carolina at Charlotte tonight. They met, and lost to, second-ranked Louisville last Friday night in the final of the Quaker City Tournament at Philadelphia.

"I really can't say how good Louisville is," Princeton Coach Bill Van Breda Kolff said after the 72-63 loss, the Tigers' first of the season after eight victories. "Ask me after the North Carolina game, I'll be able to tell better then."

North Carolina, the busiest member of the Top Ten this week with three games, goes into tonight's contest with nine victories and no defeats.

The Tar Heels didn't engage in any of the numerous tournaments this past week, but they did run away with the Tampa Invitational two weeks ago, crushing Columbia 98-66 and Florida State 81-54.

Louisville increased its record to 11-0 with three victories in the Quaker City tourney. And Princeton gave the Cardinals a surprisingly tough time in the championship game.

It was all the more surprising because Princeton was without its 6-foot-6 captain, Ed Hummer, who was ill with a stomach virus.

"I've only seen him once," Louisville Coach Peck Hickman said, "but since he's one of their five starters his loss must have hurt them some."

Nothing has hurt UCLA so far, and that includes the use of its home floor. The Bruins' eight victories all have come at home, but this week they play their first game on the road.

That contest comes Saturday at Washington State. A strange gym, however, isn't expected to have any effect on Lew Alcindor and the rest of the high-powered Bruins.

They didn't have any trouble winning the Los Angeles Classic, finishing with a 107-83 triumph over Southern California Friday night.

One other member of the Top Ten won a tournament. That was fifth-ranked New Mexico, which defeated Colorado State U. 64-49 for the Lobo Invitational title.

Fourth-ranked Texas Western finished third in the Sun Carnival while St. John's, N.Y., No. 8, wound up fifth in the Holiday Festival.

Only one major tournament was concluded Saturday night. In that one, the Queen City Classic at Buffalo, N.Y., Canisius whipped Fairfield 87-66 for the crown.

In other Saturday action Auburn defeated ninth-ranked Vanderbilt 64-51, Mississippi State walloped Georgia 93-71, Florida downed Mississippi 79-64, Kentucky stopped Notre Dame 96-85 and Memphis State knocked off Yale 57-43.

As we swept in over the northern shore of Lake Managua, I could see the capital city lying ahead, brown tile roofs sparkling in the sun. We flew low over the town in two passes with the big jet to give the inhabitants their first look at their new airplane. Then we dipped down and landed at the airport.

After the welcoming speeches were over (and they took forever in temperatures hovering right around 100 degrees), Doug and I headed for the Grand Hotel where we gratefully settled into air-conditioned rooms. After a blissful siesta, we attended a party hosted by General Somoza, candidate for the presidency of the country. The General, articulate and bilingual (Class of 1946 at West Point) began to tell us about his plans for the country.

I brought up his obvious aims at a boost in tourism and pointed out that the room situation in Managua (two major hotels and not enough rooms) had to be rectified before they really could establish a booming tourist industry. He told us of plans for two additional large hotels and an updating of the proposed plan to put more hotels into the capital.

Imagine, if you will, a country that abounds with game of all kinds and no one hunts! No game laws, no seasons, no nothing... hunting as a sport just does not exist. Not that they are against it. It is just that there is no interest in hunting whatsoever. Talk about a bonanza! The jungle abounds with everything you find elsewhere... jaguar, turkey, javelina and all manner of game birds. The opening up of this region to hunting would be the first real frontier we have encountered LEADING the St. Joseph's fast break as well as the scoring statistics, Cliff Anderson is a strong candidate for All-American honors this season. The center is 6-4.

BUT DON'T GO NEAR THE WATER

When you work for a newspaper or a magazine, you get invited on junkies. It is almost axiomatic that if a public relations director wants space for his product, he gets the best results from a trip somewhere for something. Usually, I avoid these like a plague.

If an area or a product is worthy of mention, it gets mentioned in this column because of its worthiness, not because of largesse. But occasionally, curiosity gets the best of me. Such was the case when Peter Capstick called me at me hotel in New York several months ago.

"Can you go to Nicaragua this Monday?" He asked, just like it was around the corner.

Now, I had never been to this country, even though I have been above and below it in South and Central America. The idea interested me. Pete explained, "I want you to take an advance look at the region there and then decide whether you wish to go down there to see the fishing later on next year. Lanica Airlines is sending through their inaugural jet flight next week, and I'd like to have you join the press corps that is going down with it."

The rest of the week was hectic... my tag was stolen, this containing my passport and health papers, so I had to re-outfit myself in summer-weight clothes and rush about getting vaccinated. Amazingly, everything came out all right, and I showed up at the appointed time to make the flight.

The flight down was fun, as it was expected to be. The boys in the press group were new to me with the exception of Doug Kennedy, TRUE magazine's energetic editor. By the time we completed the four-hour-plus hop, we all knew each other and the atmosphere was festive.

Nicaragua is a lovely land, all mountains, jungle, plains and fertile regions. Two major lakes, Nicaragua and Managua, lie along the coast, providing ample irrigation for the rich farmland surrounding.

THE WELL CHILD

Source Outside Family Might Help Glue-Sniffer

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A mother writes that her son, 16, has been sniffing glue used to make model airplanes for two years. It is affecting his schoolwork. He gives as an excuse the fact that it helps him forget his troubles — some of which I suspect he wouldn't have if he quit sniffing glue.

This is a serious and difficult problem because sniffing will injure his health, especially if he tends, as many do, to increase the dosage gradually. The chemicals in the glue poison the liver, heart, kidneys, blood-forming organs and the nervous system.

Sniffing is indulged in by youngsters who would rather forget their troubles than conquer them. Everyone has troubles and infancy is not too soon to start teaching a child to face up to them. Each year that goes by without this lesson having been learned makes the learning much harder.

This teenager needs help from an authoritative figure outside the family that he admires and respects. This might be an athletic coach, teacher, clergyman or doctor but it would have to be someone who could gain his confidence by offering friendship and understanding.

We sincerely thank our many friends for the food, flowers, and every kindness extended to us during the loss of our father.

This week's series will discuss the troubles of experts. Experts don't make as many mistakes as other players but they do make them and when they do, some are beauties.

Today we see four of our greatest players at the table. Some people would open the North hand but this expert chose to pass. East was strictly an action expert. Almost anyone would pass his hand when vulnerable against nonvulnerable opponents but not this man. He elected to open the bidding with three spades.

West gave a conservative raise to four spades even though he was accustomed to his partner's habit of making really bad preemptive bids.

North and East passed and, after considerable thought, South decided to save at five diamonds. West closed the bidding with a double. Dummy came down like a Christmas tree but South still had to lose two hearts and a club and was down one trick.

East and West would have had no trouble racking up a spade slam and East was very annoyed. He wanted to know why his partner could not have made a trifle stronger move than just raising to four spades. He pointed out that they treated any new suit response below game as a one-round force and that West might have taken a wild guess and bid five spades.

Then East suggested that West might have passed the five diamond bid around to him where upon he, East, would have gone to five spades.

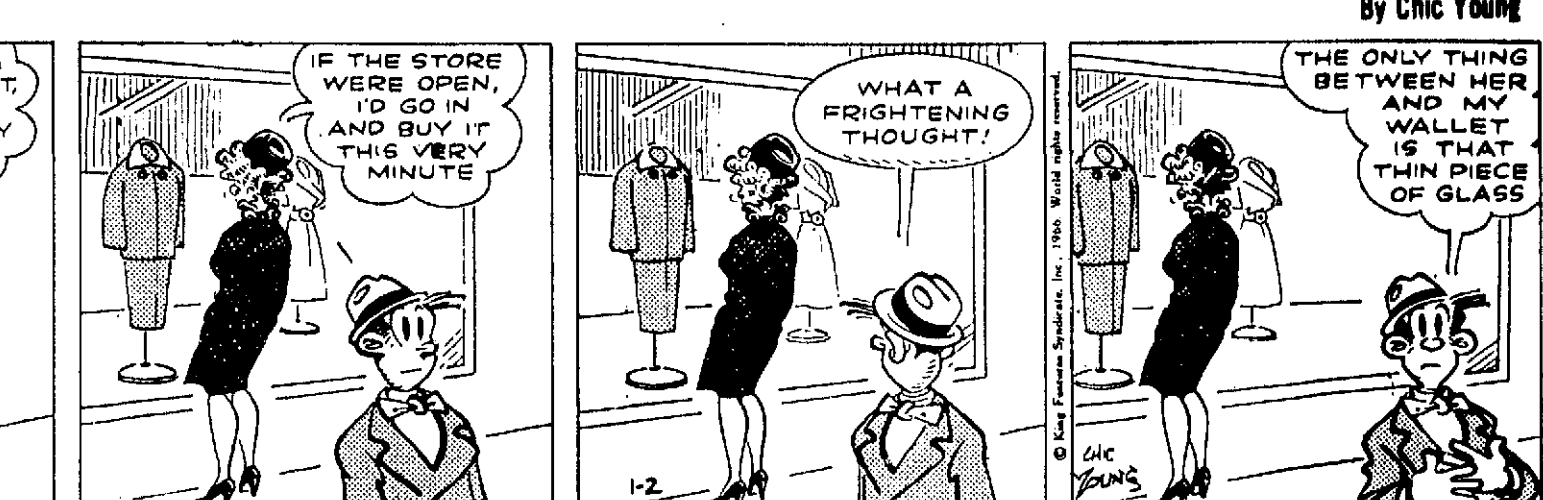

We agree with East except for one thing. A man who likes to make vulnerable three-spade bids in second seat with that sort of trash can't expect his partner ever to know what to do.

Urged to Give to Needy

The Hope Rotary Club closed out the year 1966 with a large attendance at its luncheon meeting last Friday and with a good program by Roy Anderson. The speaker advised his listeners to "clean out your clothes closets and give anything good but not in use to the needy." Cleaning out your mind and your conscience was also recommended as well as avoiding the sins of omission to improve your own life and that of others. In conclusion Mr. Anderson voiced a prayer of thanks for the gift of a new year and asked for guidance in living during it.

President Paul Klipsch welcomed the Rotarians and guests and introduced Past District Governor Frank Cochran of Bradley, who made a few brief remarks of interest to the Rotarians. Other visiting Rotarians were C. Ted Cameron and Bill Brown, Little Rock; J. W. Cobb, North Little Rock; Pete McNeice, DeQueen; Gerald Ritchie, Nashville; Russell Howard, Fayetteville; Elmer Harris, Stamps; and Billy Mitchell, Van Buren.

Guests also included: George Tenney, North Little Rock; Norman Nichols, DeQueen; J. E. Pruden, Sidney, O.; and Frank McLarty.

Youth, 14, Shoots Three to Death

ORANGE, Tex. (AP)—Police say Ronnie Lee Ozio, 14, stabbed his friend, shot and killed his father, his father's fiancée and his grandmother early New Year's Day.

District Court Judge Eugene Hoyt said the youth would be charged today with murder with malice aforethought.

Police gave this account of the tragedy at the Ozio home in an elegant apartment complex: The family and guests ushered in the new year with a game of checkers and then retired. Ronnie got up early.

He sought out the others and fired several pistol and .22 caliber rifle shots at his grandmother, Victoria Ozio, 77, and at Bobby Mayberry, 35, of Foreman, Ark., a divorcee who is engaged to his father.

The father, John A. Ozio, 39, sleeping on a pallet, was shot several times in the head. A hunting arrow was plunged deep into his chest.

Craig Mayberry, 16, a friend of the Ozio boy, sobbed: "I tried to stop him...I tried to stop him."

Mayberry was stabbed in the back with a 10-inch butcher knife, and was hospitalized in critical condition.

Debi Mayberry, Craig's 14-year-old sister, awoke to her

Cuba Standard of Living Slaughtered

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Fidel Castro's first eight years in power are depicted by the Citizens Committee for a Free Cuba as a slaughter of living standards amid U.S. failure to face up to communism.

"While the work increases and the pay decreases, the living standard of the average Cuban has sunk to a level of austerity or rose," the committee said on the Castro takeover anniversary in a report on "Cuba and U.S. policy."

The committee, headed by Spruille Braden, former U.S. Ambassador to four Latin American countries, and including prominent Americans in many walks of life, criticized the State Department's Cuban policy.

"Impatience among Latin American countries with the State Department — and fear of a Soviet-propelled Cuba — has risen to unusual heights," said the report, prepared by Paul Bethel, former U.S. diplomat in Cuba.

It recalled that the new Organization of American States head, Eduardo Ritter of Panama, in a recent speech "scored the United States for failing to act in the face of danger which Cuba obviously poses to the hemisphere."

The report said Ritter "plainly implied that the U.S. policy of encouraging dissident Cubans to flee their country and seek refuge in the United States is no policy at all."

The solution, said the committee, lies rather "in making it possible to return to a free and Democratic Cuba; in short, liberate Cuba."

The report cited a $1 million weekly cost to Americans of the Cuban refugee program including a daily airlift, adding "but the greatest cost — and Castro's greatest gain — lies in the human suffering which the airlift inadvertently has created."

"Castro has been supplied with a slave labor force of approximately 400,000 rebellious Cubans — those who have refused to sign work contracts (because they wanted to go into exile) and those conscripted into labor battalions over the past year — who work on state farms and in state enterprises for seven pesos a month. Put bluntly, the State Department has bargained $52 million for the imprisonment of 400,000 Cubans."

The report said that in 1957 Cuba's annual per capita income of $554 was twice the Latin American average. But "the per capita income of Cuba's now under-nourished and ill-clothed population of over 7 million is calculated at 177 pesos in 1966, and the peso is worth about 10 cents in U.S. currency."

Gray, damp weather hung over most of the Eastern and Northern sections of the nation today and dense fog spread along the central California coast.

Snow fell throughout the Northeast and snowflakes dusted Michigan and the upper Great Lakes. Light snow fell in the northern Rockies and through the Dakotas.

Upstate New York and much of New England measured two inches of snow in a six-hour period.

In Connecticut and parts of Pennsylvania snow mixed with rain, icing roads.

Wet weather penetrated the Southeast as well. Rain fell in a band from northern Florida across the Carolinas.

Skies were clear through most of the West.

Lakers Nip Celtics in Close One

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Bumping heads with both the Boston Celtics and Green Bay Packers on the same day was no picnic for Los Angeles' struggling Lakers. But it brought out the best in Jerry West and Elgin Baylor.

West drilled in 35 points and Baylor hit the winning free throw with two seconds to play as the Lakers nipped Boston's defending National Basketball Association champions 111-110 Sunday in the opener of a weekly series of nationally-televised NBA games.

The ABC-TV inaugural, however, ran opposite the Green Bay-Dallas video scrap for the National Football League title, and the West-Baylor heroics went unnoticed by a good part of the television audience as a result.

Baylor, who scored 30 points in all, dropped in the tie-breaker after hitting a hook with 1:01 remaining to knot the count at 130-130.

The one-point victory gave the Lakers, who are mired in the Western Division cellar, two successive victories for only the second time this season. The loss, only the ninth for Boston in 36 starts, dropped the Celtics seven games behind the front-running Philadelphia 76ers in the Eastern Division.

While the Lakers made it two in a row for the first time since mid-November, St. Louis snapped New York's longest winning streak in eight years, trimming the Knickerbockers 128-105 behind a third-period flurry and Bill Bridges' 31 points.

The Knicks had won five straight — their best string since the 1958-59 season when they last made the post-season playoffs. But the Hawks took a 82-76 lead and then shoved in 15 straight points to wrap up the contest.

Moon Mullican of Doughboy Fame, Dies

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — Moon Mullican, whose twangy, backwoods voice helped sell records, elect politicians and make "the bottles bounce on the table," is dead at 57.

Born Aubrey Mullican at Corrigan, Tex., he became "Moon" on his first record in 1931.

Mullican died Sunday after a heart attack. He had been under a doctor's care since he finished recording an album featuring himself as "Mr. Honky Tonk Man." Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Mullican's biggest hit was "I'll Sail My Ship Alone." He campaigned with fellow hillbilly singer Jimmie — "You Are My Sunshine" — Davis as Davis made two successful bids for governor of Louisiana.

Mullican's start in radio in Texas was with the Light Crust Doughboys of Gov. W. Leo Daniel.

Loony Larceny show beat

By MEADER G. PATTINGTON
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—One wonders what gives with those who make the annual loony larceny list because, for the second straight year, no one walked off with the kitchen sink.

Or at least no kitchen sink was reported missing. Of course, everything else was.

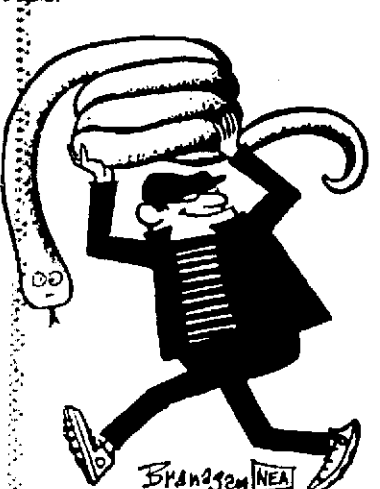

For openers, the 1966 list shows that an East Charlotte, Va. citizen had his cast iron bathtub removed without his permission.

In Fort Worth, a thief laid off a lifetime supply of spark plugs—37,000 of them taken from an auto supply house.

And in Manila, the Philippines, thieves made off with a man's entire home while he and his family were absent for two months. All household furnishings were left on the lot where the house once stood.

Police in Mexico City are still investigating the theft of a 10-ton pavement roller. A watchman who saw it taken was unable to stop the men.

Onion rustlers took 27,000 sacks of onions near Deming, N.M.

Talk about leftists, a thief in Louisville stole $1,960 worth of shoes—all for the left foot.

Some will steal anything. A man in Phoenix, Ariz., had his 7½-foot Mexican boa constrictor stolen from his back yard.

Numbers seemed no hindrance. A motel in Kansas City reports someone stole, very methodically, 145 television sets from 145 rooms.

A mile of cable was taken from an air base at Lakehath, England, and a man in Wetherby, England, reported a 35-ton wall stolen from his property. To add to the volume, hijackers drove off with a truckload of 210 air conditioners in Philadelphia.

Speaking of numbers, a beehive containing several thousand busy residents was stolen from a farm near Lansing, Mich.

A diesel locomotive was stolen from a railroad yard in Napa, Calif. The "engineer" drove it 15 miles, hit a car on a grade crossing and then decided he'd leave it to Casey.

Rustlers ain't dead yet, pardner. A herd of 59 goats were stolen from a rancher near Williams, Ore.

Automobiles also were very much in the news. A woman discovered a tire and wheel stolen from her car. Returning, after a call to police, she found someone had stolen a second wheel and tire.

In New York City, police located a stolen car, parked in front of the precinct house, notified the owner who, upon arrival, found the car had been stolen again.

But Phoenix, Ariz., beat the record. A stolen car was recovered by police and the owner arrived without a key. Returning with the key, the car again had been stolen. Recovered in a short time, again the owner, again no key, again on return—yes, that's right—stolen once more.

Jails came in for their usual hard time. In Miami, awaiting trial on a larceny charge, a man complained bitterly that someone had stolen his brand new shoes. And in Memphis, Tenn., a prisoner has been charged with looting the jail's vending machine.

All crooks don't stay that way. A seaman from Manitowish, Wis., had his stolen wallet containing $35 returned with $70 enclosed. A note said: "Please forgive me. Since Christ entered my life, I am making amends."

Alibis still are good. A thief in Halifax, England, explained that he took the money for plastic surgery on his nose.

Some victims are helpful. A housewife in Birmingham, Ala. politely backed her car out of the way so that the driver of the other car who had just robbed her house of television set could drive away. A man in Dallas slept in his car to protect it. It worked fine. Awakened, he was relieved of his shoes and wallet but was allowed to keep the car. And a woman asked a stranger for help in starting her stalled car in Toledo. The polite helper drove off with her purse and $20.

Tonsorial mediums weren't neglected. Two women in St. Louis were robbed of their wigs and money by a gunman. A policeman made a grab for a shoplifting suspect and ended up holding the escaped one's wig.

Bandits do have their disappointments. The bag stolen from a bank car in Maidstone, England, contained several sandwiches. The money was locked safely in the trunk. While trying to escape Los Angeles police in a stolen car, the driver pulled into a driveway—the entrance to the city jail.

A taxi driver in Statesville, N.C., told police that his stolen hubcaps were replaced with wheel-covers worth four times as much. Burglars in Woodbury, N.Y., carried off a 400-pound safe, containing exactly 100 pennies. And another unlucky thief looked back over his shoulder, ran into a wall, knocked himself out and was relieved of his $2,500 jewelry loot taken from a Warren, Mich., store.

An armed robber in Lynn, Mass., met a barrage of peanut butter jars thrown with good aim by the woman owner of the store.

People keep their money in the funniest places. A Detroit man kept $2,000 in the vegetable compartment of his daughter's refrigerator. Robbers had no trouble finding it.

A bride in Fort Worth, Tex., was indicted on a charge of stealing her wedding dress. The bridegroom was already preparing to serve a prison term for robbery.

A faulty burglar alarm was stolen in Portage, Ind., on the second trip, after $1,400 was netted on the first try. Perhaps the thieves wanted to see how one works.

An overweight woman in Colorado Springs, Colo., lost much of her obesity suddenly when store detectives removed 3 record albums, a set of bath towels, a suitcase, 3 rugs and a foot locker from her person.

Knighthood was still in flower in 1966. A bandit wearing black apparel held up two New York messengers with a three-foot sword and relieved them of $5,000. But, alas, no kitchen sink!

George Kukor and I have bought the rights to a book on Casanova's life.

"Casanova is nothing like the way he has been played before, the romantic womanizer. He was a gambler, a spy. The details of his life are little known. We might make that."

Harrison is a perfectionist. He expects it of himself and those with whom he works. Some call him ruthless, but watching him work reveals a man who knows what is right for himself and wants what is right to be the best.

He admits that being a perfectionist is difficult.

"But if you are one," he says, "you are and there it is. So we go on adjusting dialogue and adjusting moves. It is difficult to have satisfaction after a day's shooting. In the theater you know you have done as well as you can, so there is no question that it is more satisfying. Films are interesting and challenging."

"Although I am hired as an actor, I have a lot to do building the scenes, working with the director, writers and on the musical numbers. I can occasionally talk to the composer and sort of work on the material. It's really the only way on a film as difficult as this I've only done one musical film before, 'My Fair Lady,' and that performance was set in six weeks of work before it opened on Broadway. In a film like 'Doctor Dolittle,' every scene has to be backed out. We all have to work, we will use a voice man. But I think this should be treated as a serious dubbing job. I've been assured by the studio that if they don't use my sounds, I will be able to supervise and approve those they do use. A performance could be ruined by the wrong sounds."

Darkness near, Rachel Harrison pattered around the ship preparing for guests. The idea occurred that living this kind of life—and it is a variation on Harrison's everyday existence—must be pleasant. You express the thought that being Rex Harrison must, in the long run, be nice. He smiles.

"It has its ups and downs," he said. "I've been fortunate to keep on top for so long, and I'm very lucky to have Rachel."

The stapler has grown up in recent years—from an office accessory to a versatile shop tool. The staple gun or tacker is designed for quick and easy one-hand tacking, can be used to fasten a variety of materials.

With a staple gun you can drive staples as fast as you can squeeze the handle. Fastening screening to a frame or tacking upholstery you can cut the time down to nothing compared with the tack and hammer method.

Staple guns come in a variety of sizes and prices. The simple office stapler used for fastening together papers will double as a staple gun for light duty work. Most models open so that the staple can be driven through light material, for such jobs as fastening down shelf paper. But for heavy duty jobs these haven't enough driving power. Office staplers are operated by pressing on the top of the stapler with the palm of the hand. You must provide the power. The heavier gun is operated differently, but with no more difficulty. The handle is squeezed between palm and fingers and this triggers a powerful spring. This in turn activates a thin-blade plunger that drives the staple into the surface of the material.

Leaning Hells
Keep the base of the gun flush against the material's surface. Add the weight of your body to the action of the gun by leaning in as you squeeze the handle. If the gun has a tendency to jump, use your other hand to steady the gun.

Staples come in a variety of sizes, the most common being one-quarter-inch, five-sixteenths-inch, three-eighths-inch, one-half-inch and nine-sixteenths-inch. Buy a gun that will handle all of them interchangeably and you will have a truly versatile tool.

Use the right staple for each job. Change staples going from one job to another. The smallest is for light duty, fastening paper and light fabrics. Move up a little higher (three-eighths) for screening and go to the one-half-inch size for thin molding. These medium-length staples also are good for carpeting, heavy upholstery and weatherstripping.

The largest size is for special jobs, such as putting up ceiling tiles. For such a job as HOLLYWOOD (NEA) Mission: Impossible will be expanded to 90 minutes next season . . . CBS will start the show a half-hour earlier, figuring that will give it a better chance at achieving its impossible mission—beating NBC's Saturday Night at the Movies . . . I don't know if Gary Lockwood will ever make a western hero . . . Shooting "Firecreek," the new James Stewart-Henry Fonda western, Gary came up with a blister on his trigger finger . . . Roy Thinnies' dressing room has only one objet d'art in evidence—his Army combat boot, bronzed . . . Sometimes movie accuracy is discarded in favor of movie economy, as in a recent scene for "The King's Pirate" . . . Pirate Doug McClure was supposed to be punished and director Don Weis O.K.'d a flogging scene, even though he knew pirates didn't flog their crewmen at that time . . . But the real type of punishment—keelhauling—would have meant an added expense of $50,000, so that was out . . . Flogging is cheaper to photograph.

After 3½ years in Australia, Anne Baxter is back in action in a big way. She and her husband, Randolph Galt, decided that Los Angeles offered more in the way of educational opportunities for their children than Giro, a station (ranch) 180 miles north of Sydney.

Since her return, she's made three movies; obviously, an actress of her talent and beauty will always be in demand. While that hasn't changed, Anne is disturbed by a change in the incidence of nudity in films—not only in Hollywood, but all over the world.

Indeed, Perfectionists Have Troubles
By JOAN CROSBY

ST. LUCIA, W.I.—(NEA)—Somehow, on this British island that is both awesome and sublime in its almost primeval beauty, you don't expect to see a poster advertising "Cleopatra."

You don't really expect to see Rex Harrison, either. But both are here.

Harrison, his wife Rachel Roberts and his son Carey, are living aboard a two-masted schooner, the Ring Andersen, anchored in Marigot Bay while he is filming location scenes for "Doctor Dolittle." It is a $50 million production of the classic Hugh Lofting children's stories, being produced by Arthur Jacobs for 20th Century-Fox release.

To get to the set, on the shore of the bay, Harrison has merely to go to launch.

Now the day's shooting was over, twilight was casting lovely shadows on the historic, beautiful bay and Harrison was relaxing on the yacht's quarter-deck, a cool drink in hand.

"Basically," Harrison said, reflecting on his career, "I want to return to the stage, but I don't want a musical. I always find it an agony to make a decision on what I want to do next. To find something I really like, whether I think it will be a success or not—well, I find I have reservations about almost everything."

What bothers her isn't so much that such films are made, but that the American audience, judging by box office statistics, seems to want them.

"Are we a nation of voyeurs?" she asks. "Why do we flock to see nudity and degenerate things? Is it because we need instruction in degeneration? Is it because we get vicarious thrills out of such sights?"

Whatever the answers, Anne Baxter wants no part of any of those movies. She'll continue to run a gamut of films of various types, as she always has—"I've always been malleable"—and, post-Australia, has done a western ("The Tall Women"), a comedy ("The Busy Body") and a western melodrama ("Death Dance at Banner").

One of the big hopes for television in '67 is CBS Playhouse, an intermittent series of original dramas. Leading off on Jan. 29 will be "The Final War of Oily Winter," which Fred Coe is producing.

"The show," Coe says, "is being publicized and ballyhooed as a special. In the old days—when I did the Philco-Goodyear show—this would have been just one of the series. In those days, out of a cycle of 13 plays, if three were winners I was lucky. But under this set-up, each one will have to be a winner."

Add Coe's name to the list of New York-based television creators who have given up the coast—the East Coast.

"I never considered moving here before," Coe says, "mainly because my older children were reluctant to leave their schools. But now they are in college and my younger children are still transplantable."

"So we may come out here soon. I'm directing a picture at MGM in the spring—"The Cannibal Is Coming," from a story by Art Buchwald—and that will keep me here some months."

"There's another reason—the smog in New York. You think you've got smog here? You really haven't seen smog until you see what we have in New York these days. It's terrible."

That may be the first case on record of someone moving to Los Angeles to escape smog.

Look Ma, No Hands!

Physical fitness begins early for youngsters at a St. Louis YMCA. In the guise of play, they strengthen their four-year-old bodies by bouncing on trampolines, working on vaulting horses, and sliding down balancing beams. The program is designed to avoid any sign of regimentation and yet provide the children with real physical exercise.

Through it all mothers watch anxiously as their children show off their new-found skills and daring. Maternal reactions vary from concern to pride (above), and one mother comforts her tot who fell off a balancing beam. At lower left a youngster bounces exuberantly on a trampoline, while another concentrates on negotiating a balancing beam.

The staple hammer is a staple gun for heavy duty use and handles like a hammer as it drives the staple on making more contact with the surface. Where great holding power is required, use rosin-coated staples. Treat a staple gun as you would any other tool. Store it properly and keep it from rusting.

Never fire a staple into the air, only against a surface. Aside from the obvious danger to bystanders, the practice will harm the tool when the plunger does not meet resistance.

might just wish to drop dead. "Unlike a woman, no man wants to be outstanding in the way he dresses," says Nell Fox of Brooks Brothers. "He wants to be able to walk into a gathering and see every other man wearing the same kind of blue suit and tie that he wears. He just wants to feel dressed in the best of taste."

This is a comment typical of Brooks Brothers, unfortunately. That fine old store is the sanctum sanctorum of conservative good taste. It is also very dull.

An interesting example of the male desire for clothes conformity was recounted by Arnold Dokson of Wallach's Fifth Avenue:

"During the last nine years, I have been serving a customer who buys three new suits a year. Always the same color, medium blue, always the same style, conservative. The only variation is the weight—heavy in the fall, lighter in the spring, tropical for summer. Such a pleasant man, but such a monotonous dresser."

The salesmen did forget to point out that only recently did menswear manufacturers bother making more interesting clothes. And store buyers, steeped in conservatism, rarely gambled with a colorful garment.

This spring, however, customers will be hard put to find dull clothes in the shops. Manufacturers, with a sharp eye on the youth market, have discovered color. And how will men respond to this bold and brilliant spring?

Like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, one clothier said. The Monday-to-Friday conservative will naturally break out into plaid jacket and bright slacks for the weekend—because he will be sure that his colleagues will be doing likewise.

Suit Yourself

By BOB COCHNAR

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Apparently few men are heroes to their clothing salesmen. Suit sellers, it would seem, generally feel their customers are about as fashion-conscious as honeydew melons.

Haberdashers are, as all haberdasher enthusiasts know, inclined to view their customers as helpless nits who wouldn't know a warp from a woof even if they stumbled over one, which is difficult to do.

Nevertheless, the suave salesman will invariably whisper encouraging nothings to the dubious client as he tries on a jacket which may or may not fit. They call it "caveat emptor."

But nail a clothier down, as the Fastener Research Bureau of Seovill Manufacturing Co. did recently, and he's apt to be patiently truthful and concerned with his customers.

He will admit, for example, that even in these fashion-conscious days "most men who buy our clothes are not motivated by fashion." That's from Douglas Murtaugh of New York's F. H. Tripler & Co., an elegant, traditional haberdashery.

"It's only prodding by their wives which results in men going out and buying a new suit," he adds. "And as for color preference, 90 per cent of the men want grays and blues for regular wear."

The Tripler-dressed man is, however, conservative and not particularly interested in playing the peacock.

The clothiers surveyed agreed on the phenomenon that it makes a man happy to wear a suit that blends into the wall—even if it is the same pattern and color as the fellow's standing next to him. It's a feeling of security, they supposed. Under similar circumstances, some women

The light-emitting device would be used in an electronic system that would help eliminate accidents caused by unexpected stops and turnpike fatigue. Antifilibuster Rule Again Faces Senate

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The start of the new Congress will once again find the Senate caught up in a tussle over its antifilibuster rule.

As usual, the battle will stir up a lot of parliamentary dust likely to obscure what both sides regard as fundamental issues. It also may put Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey — the Senate's presiding officer — on a politically sticky spot.

The dispute is over Senate Rule 22 under which a two-thirds majority of senators voting is required to cut off debate. Once the rule is put into effect, each senator's speaking time is limited to one hour.

In its present form this closure (debate-closing) rule was adopted in 1959. It was largely the handiwork of Lyndon B. Johnson, then the Senate's Democratic leader, and represented a slight modification of an earlier rule requiring a two-thirds majority of the Senate membership to shut off a filibuster.

With the beginning of each new Congress since then, a bipartisan group of liberals has led a fight for a change that would permit cloture to be imposed by three-fifths or a majority of the Senate.

For years they have argued that the two-thirds rule blocked the passage of meaningful civil rights legislation, forced the watering-down of other controversial measures and encouraged paralyzing filibusters.

Southern senators led by Democratic Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia have been in the forefront of those opposing any further limitation on freedom of debate. For this reason the issue has taken on a civil rights coloration.

But Russell and other senators from outside the South have contended what is at stake is whether the Senate will be subjected to "gag rule."

Much of the steam was taken out of the fight for a change in Rule 22 two years ago by the passage in 1964 of the most comprehensive civil rights bill in the nation's history. A Southern filibuster against the measure was cut off by a 71-29 vote.

The argument that the two-thirds rule blocked enactment of meaningful civil rights measures was further weakened with the passage of the 1965 voting rights bill after a Dixie filibuster was halted by a 70-30 vote.

These were the first two instances in which Rule 22 had been successfully invoked against civil rights measures, but it was a different story this year on the administration's open housing bill.

After the House passed the bill, the Senate killed it by twice refusing to put its antifilibuster rule into effect. The first vote was 54 for cloture and 42 against; the second, 52 for and 41 against.

This has fueled fresh demands for a change in the two-thirds rule, along with the inability at the last session to break a filibuster against a bill to repeal a section of the Taft-Hartley Act which permits states to ban the union shop.

Proponents of a change contend that at the start of a Congress a change in rules can be made by majority vote without having to muster a two-thirds majority to halt a filibuster. Opponents maintain the rules carry over.

In the new Congress convening Jan. 10 the issue may be put up to Humphrey who as a senator was in the forefront of those battling to permit minorities to be choked off by majority vote.

Mummers to Parade in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 72-year-old stutter-stepper who's been marching in Mummers parades for 50 years picks up his banjo again today to join the city's traditional salute to the new year.

About 1.5 million spectators are expected to line the three-mile route on Broad Street for the 67th parade. Some 16,000 bandsmen and comics will be competing for $75,000 in prizes this year. The prize money has been upped over the years from the $1,725 appropriated in 1901.

"It takes a fellow who's in A-1 shape to go the route," said the veteran, Raymond J. Verlinghieri, a retired shipyard worker who has toted a 15-pound banjo in the parades since 1917.

The mummers — caped and plumed, sequined and speckled — will prance to string music, including, "Oh Dem Golden Slippers," during the eight hour extravaganza.

The tradition-rich parade goes back to the turn of the century and pays homage to the mythical greek figure, Momus, god of mimicry.

The parade is divided into three divisions:

— The comics who poke good natured fun with their skits at persons and events that made headlines during the year;

— The fancy brigades with satin-covered floats and capes that stretch 200 feet in length;

— And the plumed and sequined string bands whose brassless orchestration of string, rhythm and reed instruments and percussion are a musical symbol of Philadelphia.

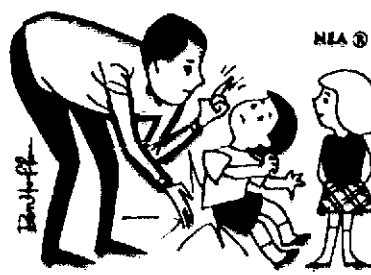

The Mummers Day celebration can be traced to Nordic, Latin, and Celtic influences that date to the 1600s.

That is when the Swedish-Americans introduced the business of making noise to welcome in the new year. They would visit their neighbors on Tincum Island on the Delaware River, ringing bells and pounding pots to scare away the devils.

British variations were added in the 1700s. Parties of men — either faces powdered, sooted and painted — would march door to door.

The Gaelic touch came in the 1800s when the Irish immigrants ranged from South Philadelphia to Independence Hall with any device that would make noise.

And later in that century, the Italians added their own special flavor to the Philadelphia celebration. This was largely in the form of music and a knack for costuming. And it was accepted policy for the parties to burst wildly into the streets.

LBJ to Ask Anti-Crime Measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson says he will ask Congress for new anticrime measures proposed by a presidential commission which reported a dramatic increase in crime in the nation's capital.

Washington's crime rate rose 116 per cent between 1959 and 1965, the commission found, while the increase for cities of comparable size was 63 per cent. At the same time, the commission appointed by Johnson in July 1965 found that Washington's police force, in proportion to the city's population, is the largest and most costly in the country. While the police force here costs $32.49 per resident, the median for cities of comparable size is $21.82.

The two-volume, 1,800-page report of the President's Commission on Crime in the District of Columbia lists more than 200 recommendations for basic changes in the city's system of dealing with crime.

Copies of the report made public Saturday night were accompanied by a statement from Johnson in which he promised to present to Congress as soon as possible any commission recommendations requiring legislation.

Many of the recommended changes would require direct congressional authorization or informal approval by the House and Senate district appropriations subcommittees.

One congressional source said Johnson's veto last Nov. 13 of the District of Columbia crime bill would make it difficult to impress on Capitol Hill the importance of the commission's recommendations.

The measure which Johnson vetoed would have permitted police to question a suspect for four hours without making an arrest. And, among other things, the measure would have permitted police to hold a suspect for another six hours without interrogation — making perhaps a total of 10 hours before he would be taken before a judicial officer.
